BATH.

A heavy snow storm passed over this village on Wednesday morning, but not enough snow fell to prevent the mail from making its lightning trips to and from the station.

A number of our young people attended the ball at Stella on Monday evening last and, judging from the time they arrived home, and the racket they made in the village, they must have enjoyed themselves.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hogle have returned from a visit with their daughter, Mrs. R. J. Green, of Lansdowne.

Miss Mabel Aylsworth and Miss Ethel Hawley are suffering from heavy colds.

Miss Eva Wemp has returned from visiting friends in Kingston and Wolfe Island. Miss Julia Burley is visiting friends in Picton.

A Practical Prima Donna.

"Do you think," asked the young man who was preparing some interviews with great people on trivial topics, "that a light opera singer should marry, if she is really and truly ambitious to succeed in her art?"

The queen of burlesque stopped reading what her press agent had written long enough to respond:

"Surely, sir, you cannot be serious. If we didn't marry how could the papers say anything about our divorce?"—Washington Star.

He Could Tell.

"See that young couple," said the doorkeeper at the theatre.

"Yes."

"They've been married a little over a month. I don't know their names, nor where they live, but I can tell that much about 'em."

"How?"

"They used to come every week and sit in the orchestra chairs. Now they come every other week and sit in the balcony."—Washington Star.

A Turn in the Conversation.

"I see," remarked Mr. Snaggs, as he laid down his newspaper, "that Melba's throat is very sore, and therefore her voice can't—"

"Her voice can't what?" asked Mrs. Snaggs.

"Soar."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

The Life of a Clam.

The clam's body is completely enshrouded in the mantle, except for two openings, through one of which the foot can be pushed out. The other is for the siphon, or what is commonly known as the "neck" of the clam. In some respects the clam may be a little better off than we are, for he has a little brain in his foot and also a gland for secreting strong fibres. With this he spins a byssus by which he can attach himself to whatever he likes. He does not even have to search for his food, but waits for it to come to him. He makes a furrow in the mud or sand, attaching himself to the bottom of the byssus. Then he thrusts his siphon up through the mud and water until it reaches the surface. The siphon is made up of two tubes, the water flowing in through one and out the other.

"That's what they call 'fool's gold,' Jaggars," I said. "It's entirely worthless. You couldn't get a dollar for a thousand tons of it. You've had a narrow escape. You might have married the decrepit Widow Buggles and her worthless clearing. Let Pete Sykes have the widow if he wants her."

My friend at last awoke to the true situation. He stamped and thumped and knocked things around the office, and yelled and swore until things looked blue.

"Let Pete have the widder?" he yelled. "Why, great crackin' heels of Julius Caesar's ghost! There ain't no widder! The Widder Buggles, old an' ratty an' deaf an' without an off eye, ain't the Widder Buggles! She's Elmathan Jaggars, by thumps, for I stole a march on Pete, an' married her this mornin'!"

And my friend from 'way back dashed out of the office and away. I never put his piece in the paper.

TESLA'S NEW INTERRUPTER.

An Electrical Current Broken 80,000,000 Times a Second.

Nikola Tesla, the great electrician, has just taken out patents for a device for producing almost incalculable electrical vibrations, and the Electrical Review gives a full description of the invention and its uses. It was by the use of this device that Mr. Tesla has been able to demonstrate the scientific possibility of producing brilliant illumination by means of vacuum tubes that were not in mechanical contact with the electric source. Under the influence of a current of electricity interrupted 60,000,000 or 80,000,000 times a second the tubes with which Mr. Tesla was experimenting burst into a brilliant white light, which was demonstrated by photography to be much more powerful than the arc electric light, although the tubes were entirely disconnected and stood so far away from the exciting coils that Mr. Tesla sat in a large armchair between the tubes and the coil while he was photographed by the light of the tubes.

No such effect has ever been produced by any other means, and this gives only a rough indication of the ways in which Mr. Tesla's latest patented device may be of use in the arts. For the production of Roentgen rays, the making of ozone and argon, and for electro-therapeutic treatment, the new device will find immediate use.

The interruption of electrical currents for the purpose of breaking these currents into electrical waves or vibrations has never before been a purely mechanical operation. In its simplest form this is done by the commutator or vibrating armature of the Runkof induction coil. The vibrations of such an armature or even of the needle with which the armature has been replaced in some devices, must be confined within the narrow limit of a few hundred to the second. Rotating interrupters, connecting and breaking the electrical circuit, with a change in the position of their teeth as they revolved, added much to the number of interruptions which could be obtained, but even their best speed bore but a pitiful relationship to the 100,000,000 or more vibrations a second which Mr. Tesla calculates that he has obtained from his device. The simplicity of the latter is one of the remarkable features.

On Skin.

"What is the general effect upon the system of your patent syringe process of injecting beneath the skin a fluid which marvelously restores the beauty of the complexion?" asked the reporter who had been sent to interview Mme. Epidermis, the great cuticle-cultivist, for the express purpose of exposing what was suspected to be a fake.

Mme. Epidermis regarded him with a cold eye and a disdainful mien. "My invention concerns the skin, sir. I have nothing to do with the general effects upon the system."

"In fact you do not go beneath the skin?" "No, sir."

"On the proverbial principle, I suppose, that beauty is only skin deep?" Mme. Epidermis did not answer.

"I may conclude then, madame, that yours is exclusively a skin business, as it were?"

Mme. Epidermis spoke, but where, oh, where had vanished her cold, haughty, aristocratic reserve? Where was now that piquant Parisian accent with which she had previously spoken?

"Skin out of here young fellow! There was nothing ambiguous about the invitation. It was simple and direct."

The reporter withdrew gracefully. "I have discovered a new wrinkle," he murmured as he descended the stairs.

A Popular German Citizen.

Well-Known in Hamilton for the Past 40 Years. What He Has to say About Kidney Trouble.

Mr. George Schumacher, 98 McNamee-street north, Hamilton, Ont., well known in business circles in Hamilton during the past 40 years as a skillful cabinet maker, an adept at such delicate work as repairing billiard tables, etc., gave the following account of his rescue from the clutches of sciatica through the use of Doan's Kidney Pills.

Said Mr. Schumacher: "For a number of years prior to May last I have had sciatica in my left hip, at times so bad as to incapacitate me from working. The pain extended down my left leg and across my back just above the hips. I was so sore that I could not bear the weight of my body, and so stiff that it was only with a painful effort I managed to walk."

"I have doctored a great deal for my complaint, and derived but little benefit. Last May Mr. Macon, a friend of mine, advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills as they had helped him wonderfully. I therefore got a box of the pills from Spackman's drug store, No. 1 Market Square. After taking them for four days I commenced to get better and thenceforward my improvement was rapid. I have had no pain or difficulty in getting around all summer and my health generally is better than it has been for a long time. I took just two boxes, and I assure you that they proved a great remedy for me. Should I ever become afflicted with the terrible pains of sciatica again, I shall very promptly resort to the use of this marvelous medicine. (Signed) George Schumacher, Hamilton, Ont."

TAMWORTH.

The Village is again cast in gloom through the very sudden death of Mrs. D. Taylor an old and respected citizen, who has crossed the border to meet her husband, who died some seven years ago. Two sons, Clayton, merchant of Westport, and Jay, cabinet maker, etc., of this town, are left to mourn. We extend to them our sympathy in their loss. The funeral took place on Wednesday to the Methodist church, of which she was a member.

Miss Fannie Milligan entertained a few of her young friends on the evening of the 15th. They had a very pleasant time.

Some of our young people have received a few valentines this year as a reminder, I suppose, of their varied traits of character.

Our merchants decided to close their places of business through the winter months at 8 o'clock. The only penalty, imposed was their honor, and it is to be regretted that some of them, after signing their names to the agreement, have not kept it, and try to make it very unpleasant for the rest. When a man agrees to anything he is expected to fulfil it, especially when he or they are looked up to. We do hope no more of this will happen.

Our revival services are yet carried on and a good attendance is still kept up. A great many are professing Christ and going forward. It is to be hoped they will live consistent thereto and show by their work their changed lives.

A special vestry meeting was called last Monday to arrange for the rebuilding of the sheds. Tenders are asked for. The tenders will be open until the 22nd inst. Plans and specifications can be seen at C. G. Coxall's, Tamworth. Length of shed 120 feet, width 22 feet.

Our weather is very fine, and our snow is fast disappearing. The roads are bare in some places.

Mrs. E. Cowan and grand-daughter left last Saturday for Colborne to visit her son, George. They intend to stay three weeks.

Miss A. Trigg, Miss E. Coxall, and Miss Kirk were the guests of Mrs. Robert Close Sunday evening.

CONWAY AND SANDHURST.

Trotting horses are and are the rage around here at present.

Mr. Frank Wisikin is visiting friends in Kingston at present.

Messrs. M. Switzer, F. G. Young and S. Shorey were in Bath on Sunday last.

Miss Susie Shorey spent some time last week in Nanapanewa.

Miss Marion Paterson of Stella is spending a few weeks as the guest of Mr. R. Wright.

Mr. E. H. Wright is training Sweepstakes No. 2, in order that he may be ready for the March races.

Mr. James Hill jr. has the asthma.

Mrs. Rev. Shorey was surprised by a number of her friends on Thursday evening last and a most enjoyable time was spent by all present.

The Hill Bros. are busily engaged nowadays in cutting wood with their circular saw for their neighbors.

Mr. David Brooks, cur enterprising cobbler, intends leaving soon for a more desirable settlement. His future departure is greatly regretted.

George Switzer was in Kingston Thursday attending market.

Entries for the March races are coming in very fast. All the old and reliable trotters, it is claimed, will be in it this time.

Samantha Williams is sick.

Mrs. E. J. Wright is visiting friends at Nanapanewa.

Miss Gertie Galloway is very sick at present.

Mr. W. H. Wright, the popular president at the Jockey Club, reports that the club is in a flourishing condition as regards members and finances.

Messrs. E. V., E. H., and G. Wright spent Thursday in Picton.

Mr. J. Kepby and sisters, of Sydenham, are visiting at Mr. G. Phippen's this week.

Mrs. J. Armstrong, of Mill Haven, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. R. Phippen, at present.

with minute plants and animals, reaches the gill chamber, some of these are sifted out and retained for food while the water and waste matter flow through the other tube.

The clam's eggs are carried by the mother on her gills. When there are fish in the water with them the mother clams discharge the eggs, which soon hatch, but if there are no fish they carry the eggs until they decay. The reason of this strange behavior is this: When the eggs are set free in the water they soon hatch, and the little ones swim about until they find some fish to which to attach themselves. They live for a time on the mucus of the fish, and then drop off, sink to the bottom and form burrows for themselves. This curious semi-parasitic life is no doubt a reversion to the habit of some ancient ancestor.—Appleton's Monthly.

Puget Sound Flax.

Every fresh test of the quality of Puget Sound flax results in confirming the claim that it is the equal of any in the world and far superior to most. The progress in establishment of its production as a steady and permanent industry is nevertheless very slow. The Federal Government has given aid in securing experiments in culture, and it is not probable that further appropriations can be had except to maintain the station. An effort will be made to persuade the State Legislature to extend financial aid, but the outlook for it is not promising.

The success of flax production will depend chiefly upon the enterprise and perseverance of a few farmers who will pay attention to the requirements of good flax, and will unite to purchase the inexpensive machinery necessary to turn the farm product into merchantable flax. This they can ship abroad to the manufacturers and insure a fair profit on their investment.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

The Worst River on Earth.

"The scourge of China," is what they call the Yang-tse-Kiang River. During the last 200 years its floods have fourteen times forced the massive dams of the central provinces and each time covered its banks with thousands of human corpses. In 1883 its inundation ravaged the province of Hupeh to an extent which can be retrieved only by the labors of many successive generations. Another terrible flood occurred a few years since, which spread its havoc over an area of 250,000 square miles in the most densely populated districts of China. The loss of life on that occasion has been estimated at 750,000, even after deducting the hundreds of thousands that succumbed to the subsequent famine or those slain by marauders and hunger-crazed cannibals.

Penological.

They broke the news to the convict as gently as possible, but he was nevertheless quite overcome.

"Pardon?" he shrieked, "surely you jest. You shock me, Pardon? For me? After I have been habituated to every luxury? It will kill me. Mercy! I implore you, mercy!"

But there was no mercy. The will of the law was inexorable.—Detroit Tribune.

The Cruel Truth Forced Home.

"Ah, Henry," she sighed, "it is very kind of you to tell me that I am still beautiful and that I look as youthful as I did ten years ago, but you are wrong. I have had proof of it."

"Why, my darling, what do you mean?" he asked.

"To-day when I got aboard the car," she bitterly replied, "not a solitary man offered to give me his seat."

The clam's eggs are carried by the mother on her gills. When there are fish in the water with them the mother clams discharge the eggs, which soon hatch, but if there are no fish they carry the eggs until they decay. The reason of this strange behavior is this. When the eggs are set free in the water they soon hatch and the little ones swim about until they find some fish to which to attach themselves. They live for a time on the gills of the fish and then drop off, sink to the bottom and form burrows for themselves. This curious semi-parasitic life is no doubt a reversion to the habits of some ancient ancestor.—Appleton's Monthly.

Flax Sound Flax.

Every fresh test of the quality of Flax 8 and flax results in confirming the claim that it is the equal of any in the world and far superior to most. The progress in establishment of its production is a steady and permanent industry as nevertheless very slow. The Federal Government has given aid in making experiments in culture, and it is not probable that further attempts can be had except to maintain the station. An effort will be made to persuade the State Legislature to extend financial aid, but the outlook for it is not promising.

The success of flax production will depend chiefly upon the enterprise and perseverance of a few farmers who will pay attention to the requirements of good flax and will unite to purchase the expensive machinery necessary to turn the farm product into mercantile flax. This they can ship abroad to the manufacturers and insure a fair profit on their investment.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

The Worst River on Earth.

"The scourge of China" is what they call the Yang-tse-Kiang River. During the last 200 years its floods have fourteen times forced the massive dams of the central provinces, and each time covered its banks with thousands of human corpses. In 1883 its inundation ravaged the province of Hunan to an extent which can be retrieved only by the labors of many successive generations. Another terrible flood occurred a few years since, which spread its havoc over an area of 250,000 square miles in the most densely populated districts of China. The loss of life on that occasion has been estimated at 750,000, even after deducting the hundreds of thousands that succumbed to the subsequent famine or those slain by marauders and hunger-ravaged cannibals.

Penological.

They broke the news to the convict as gently as possible, but he was nevertheless quite overcome.

"Pardon?" he shrieked, "surely you jest. You shock me, Pardon? For me? After I have been habituated to every luxury? It will kill me. Mercy! I implore you, mercy!"

But there was no mercy. The will of the law was inexorable.—Detroit Tribune.

will be meted out to the perpetrator of this dastardly outrage. It was held by a large number of people that the crime was the work of a resident of the town, but this was not borne out by the evidence and how it came to be entertained is hard to explain. The recent development in the case will do away with this idea and remove the unjust suspicion directed against several of our citizens.

To anyone at all conversant with the facts it cannot but be admitted that Mr. James Aylsworth was the victim of injustice when he was dismissed from his office as postmaster of the village of Tamworth in 1880. His reinstatement by the Liberal Government is but a simple act of justice to an efficient and painstaking public servant who was summarily dismissed without cause or reason being assigned. Through the kindness of Mr. Geo. E. Deroche, barrister, Deseronto, we are able to place before our readers in this issue the report of the Postmaster General on the dismissal and reinstatement of Mr. Aylsworth. As is pointed out by Mr. Deroche, the reinstatement casts no reflection on the late post master, Mr. Rose, who proved himself an efficient and careful officer. In his deposition, however, as can readily be perceived, there was not that element of injustice entering into it, as characterized the dismissal of Mr. Aylsworth. Mr. Rose leaves office without an aspersion being cast upon his character, and if his appointment had been made in the regular way we are safe in saying he would have been left in undisturbed possession of the postmaster ship. Mr. Aylsworth should never have been dismissed and we heartily congratulate him on having come into his rights, feeling assured that he will fill the position honorably, efficiently and impartially.

TAMWORTH POST OFFICE.
(Editor of NAPANEE EXPRESS.)

DEAR SIR:—Having heard various rumors regarding the action of the Government in dismissing Mr. Rose from the Tamworth post office and appointing Mr. Aylsworth, I made mention of the matter for my own satisfaction, to the Post Master General while in Ottawa a few days since and he very kindly read me his report on the same and gave me permission to give it to the press, and which I herewith enclose.

It will be seen from this very thorough report of the Honorable Mr. Mulock that it was through no fault of Mr. Rose that he was dismissed, as the department believes him to be a faithful officer and under ordinary circumstances he would have retained his position but as will be seen from the report, Mr. Aylsworth had in 1880 been wrongfully and unjustifiably dismissed and is now being merely reinstated in an office which he should always have held.

If you will kindly give me space for this report you will oblige.

Yours truly,

G. E. DEROCHE,

Deseronto, 15th February, 1897.

OTTAWA, NOVEMBER, 19TH, 1896.

In the matter of the Postmastership at Tamworth in the County of Addington.

An application has been made by James Aylsworth, former Postmaster in this village, for the cancellation of the order dismissing him and for his re-instatement and in support of such application, he files his statutory affidavit and various papers annexed thereto.

I have examined the file of papers on record, which I assume show whatever justification existed for Mr. Aylsworth's dismissal, and find that the Postmaster-General has not placed upon record the reasons for dismissing the Postmaster but has simply endorsed a memorandum on the back of the report of the the Inspector, bearing date the 16th February, 1880, and reporting on a charge of alleged abstraction of money from a registered letter to the address of one Mrs. John Knight.

The date of this order does not appear nor had it apparently been issued as late as the 29th April, 1880, for on that day the Inspector writes Mr. Aylsworth stating that at that date the Inspector was not aware of any change to be made in the Postmastership at Tamworth.

On the 1st May, 1880, the Inspector then notified Mr. Aylsworth that the post office was to be taken from him, so that if the action of the Postmaster General in dismissing Mr. Aylsworth was based upon any circumstances connected with the alleged abstraction of money, it would seem extraordinary that an interval extending from the 6th of February, the date of the Inspector's report, and the 1st of May should have been allowed to have elapsed before the removal from the service for any such reason of an officer in so responsible a position. Such delay would certainly indicate that the Postmaster General had not regarded seriously the charges against and the Postmaster.

The facts connected with this alleged abstraction appear amongst the papers and are as follows:—

Mr. Aylsworth had been Postmaster at Tamworth from the year 1867 until the month of May, 1880. During the last few years one John E. Knight had been in his service as assistant and whilst in his service, complaint was made of loss of money from one registered letter passing through the office and one posted at that office. The Post Office Inspector investigated both these cases and wholly exonerated Mr. Aylsworth.

One of these cases arose in the year 1874 and it was some two years after-

Knight herself, according to her statement, in the presence of her brother, her mother and two sisters.

Whatever shortage of corroboration existed at the initial stage of the scheme when the letter was posted, was supplied at the conclusion by the presence of these five people together at the same time. So unusual a circumstance as five witnesses being present at the opening of a letter, all watching to see that no contents might be abstracted by the person opening it, seems to me so unusual a circumstance as to give rise to the well founded belief that there was reason to believe before the letter was opened that no money would be found to be contained in it.

Then the Inspector in his report proceeded to state: "I have investigated this case very closely at Tamworth but I am unable to form a decided opinion as to whether the money was taken out or not, yet I have an impression that it might have been" and in concluding his report states, "I am suspicious that a dishonest person has access to the Tamworth post office but I have confidence in the Postmaster and believe him to be an honest man."

In the course of this report, Mr. Barker alludes to the two other cases above referred to and in a letter dated the 27th February, 1878, writes officially to Mr. Aylsworth as follows:—"One thing more is now quite clear to me. From what Knight has been guilty of in the marriage license, that he is not the good and honest young man we were led to believe him to be from his own protestations at the commencement and I do not think I am far astray when I say that he knows more about the $19.00 that was abstracted from the letter of Mrs. Mills in August, 1874 and $5.00 from Mr. Potter's letter in November, 1876 than what he told me and I believe I am quite justified in taking what steps I may think proper in order to bring the case home to him."

Thus it would seem that Inspector Barker after a thorough investigation into all the causes not only vindicated Mr. Aylsworth but also came to the conclusion that the two previous cases were the handiwork of Knight and that Mr. Aylsworth was personally an upright, honorable man.

In his affidavit Mr. Aylsworth states that on the defeat of the Mackenzie Government it became freely stated that he was to be dismissed because of his being a Liberal, but if this circumstance was the real cause of his dismissal, it was not the assigned one, no reason whatever being given for such action. Inasmuch, however, as the investigation fully exonerated Mr. Aylsworth in respect of the registered letter transaction it is quite clear that he was not dismissed on that account.

Nevertheless the then Government, without reason assigned dismissed Mr. Aylsworth in May, 1880, and although Mr. Aylsworth promptly asked for an explanation by letter dated the 24th, May, 1880, he only learned of the matters alleged against him on the 28th, October, 1896.

His dismissal under such circumstances was, I think, extremely cruel and unjustifiable and I deem it my duty to restore him to an office from His Cure Vouched For By a Justice of the Peace.

Mr. Thomas R. Baxter, of Karsdale, N.S., aged 74 years and fast nearing the grave from a terrible complication of diseases—erysipelas for 40 years, bleeding piles for 15 years, and sciatic rheumatism for over a year—was rescued from torture, agony and death by Paine's Celery Compound after all other means had failed.

After reading the following statement, vouched for by a Justice of the Peace, how can any sane man or woman entertain doubts as to the curing virtues of the earth's only honest life giving medicine?

Mr. Baxter writes as follows:

"I desire to let you know about my wonderful cure by your precious medicine, Paine's Celery Compound.

"I was afflicted by three complaints that made my life a misery and a burden. I had erysipelas for 40 years, bleeding piles for 15 years, and sciatic rheumatism for over a year.

"I tried the doctors and all kinds of medicines, but no help or relief was afforded me, and I could not eat or sleep. I was then advised to use Paine's Celery Compound, and, oh, what a mighty change! The use of the first bottle enabled me to eat and sleep, and after using seven bottles I was quite another man; was perfectly cured, and felt young again. All that I have written can be proven by merchants, doctors, magistrates, and by three ministers of the Gospel, and by scores of other people I shall always thank you and your wonderful medicine, Paine's Celery Compound."

"I hereby certify that Paine's Celery Compound has made a well man of Thomas R. Baxter."

attention of the inspector.

The second arose in a case of an alleged abstraction of $5.00 from a letter posted the 8th November, 1876. In neither case did the Inspector so much as suspect any improper action on the part of Mr. Aylsworth.

At the time each of these cases happened, Mr. Knight had the principal charge of the office and continued in Mr. Aylsworth's service until 1878. In February of that year it was discovered that Mr. Knight had stolen a blank marriage license from him and forged Mr. Aylsworth's name to it as the issuer and used it as a marriage license himself. On discovering the offence, Mr. Aylsworth caused him to be arrested and reported the matter to the Post Office Inspector. Knight was committed for trial and admitted to bail but absconded from Canada to the Western States and has ever since continued out of Canada and never returned to stand his trial.

About one year after he absconded, Knight sent a registered letter from Fish Creek, Wisconsin, where he was residing on 27th of August, 1879 addressed to Mrs. Knight at Tamworth Post Office although at this particular time Mrs. Knight was in Michigan, A sister of her's, named Mrs. Fuller, residing at or near Tamworth, applied for the letter which was refused her because of her having no order for it.

Some three weeks later by direction of Mrs. Knight, this letter was forwarded to her in Michigan under a new cover and registered on the 25th September, 1879.

Mr. Knight alleged that in the letter as sent by him from Wisconsin, were at the time 5 Dominion Bank Bills and that when the letter was opened in Michigan there was no money in the letter. Mr. Knight, from his place in Wisconsin, then reported the alleged fact of the abstraction of the money in question.

Inspector Barker, the same officer that had to do with the former two cases, investigated the matter and made his report thereon bearing date 16th February, 1880. In this report he states that the only evidence in support of the statement that any money was contained in this letter is Mr. Knight's assertion of that fact contained in his letter to the Inspector.

Considering that Mr. Knight had been arrested for robbery and forgery, had been committed for trial and absconded, and was at the time of making this charge an outlaw from Canada, no weight, whatever, I think, should be given to such a statement of his.

The circumstance that his wife was in Michigan, at the very same time that Knight sent the registered letter addressed to her at Tamworth, goes to show that the sending of this registered letter was not for the purpose of supplying Mrs. Knight with money and it is calculated to discredit the pretence that the letter ever contained money.

The Inspector further finds from Mr. Knight's own statement that no person was present when he is alleged to have enclosed the money in the letter and the Inspector goes on to say, "I have not received as full information from Mr. Knight as I desired as he has not replied to my two last letters." The Inspector then, without giving any reason for his opinion says: "But I am of opinion that he really did enclose the money as stated but I believe no money was in the letter when Mrs. Knight received it."

Now whatever the Inspector may have believed, his own report shows, that the only foundation for his belief was the uncorroborated statement of a refugee from justice.

Then it appears that a very solemn procedure accompanied the opening of the returned letter in Michigan. Mrs. Knight's brother obtained it at the post office and it was opened by Mrs.

which he had, without any apparent justification being moved, and especially should such restitution be made inasmuch as the circumstances connected with the investigation, and which resulted in Mr. Aylsworth's absolute vindication, might, were his dismissal not cancelled, injure him in the minds of his fellow men.

I have carefully perused all the papers on record and given the fullest consideration to all the circumstances as set forth in the Inspector's report and letters, agreeing with the Inspector that Mr. Aylsworth is a thoroughly upright, honest man, and being satisfied that it was the duty of the Government of the day to have stood by an honest officer, found to have honestly discharged his public duties, instead of dismissing him as was done, his reinstatement, which I now direct, is but a tardy measure of justice due by the Government to him.

Faithful public servants, filling responsible positions, in the discharge of their duties being constantly the custodians of money and property of other people passing through their hands, are entitled to the fullest protection from the Government whenever unjust charges or reflections are cast upon them in respect of the manner in which they discharge such duties and when, as in Mr. Aylsworth's case, their personal honor is fully vindicated by the officers of the Government, they are entitled to the loyal support and protection of the Government, otherwise any Postmaster is in danger of losing his reputation by the mere act of being dismissed from office without reason assigned under the cloud that remains behind, after an investigation of an official character into some supposed case of wrong-doing although the investigation itself may, as in Mr. Aylsworth's case, have absolutely established his innocence.

—Byron's Don Juan.

The violin consists of three parts: the neck, the table and the sounding board. The strings are tuned in fifths, the compass of the instrument exceeding three octaves. The violin assumed its present shape in the beginning of the seventeenth century. Many attempts have been made to improve upon the original idea, but it is significant that the oldest violins are ever regarded as the best. The instruments manufactured by the Amati, Stradivarius and Guarnerius families of Cremona are especially celebrated.

Stradivarius, or more properly, Antonio Stradivari, the great violin-maker, was born in 1644 and died in 1737. Almost the whole of his life was passed in Cremona, Italy, where, in his gloomy workshop, he spent his days and most of his nights. He was in early life a workman in the violin factory of Amati, also a famous violinmaker, and there learned his trade. Evidence of his workmanship is thought to appear in many of the Amati violins, which become the more valuable from that circumstance. The violins made by Stradivarius in his prime differ in many particulars from those of previous makers. Though the differences, in themselves, seem trifling, the sum was sufficient to bring the violins of this celebrated maker into the highest repute, even in his own time, and no subsequent maker has been able to effect any improvement in the manufacture of this delicate instrument. The secret of the superior excellence of a genuine Stradivarius violin is believed to be partly in the wood employed, partly in the outlines and partly in the finish, said to be a secret composition. The greatest improvements he effected were in the bridge, which, before his time, was made almost at haphazard, and in fixing the exact shape of the sound holes and their position in the instrument. His violins, in his own time, were sold for four louis d'or, in England for £4. Nearly a thousand violins from his factory are known to exist, and he made a great many klts, lyres, mandolins, theorbos, lutes and guitars. His instruments are very unequal, some being too weak to bear the pressure of the bow in playing, but a genuine Stradivarius of good

"I DIDN'T THINK."

If all the troubles in the world,
Were traced back to their start,
We'd find not one in ten begun
From want of willing heart.
But there's a sly woe-working elf,
Who lurks about youth's brink,
And sure dismay he brings always—
The elf "I didn't think."

He seems so sorry when he's caught,
His mien is all contrite,
He so regrets the woe he's wrought,
And wants to make things right,
But wishes do not heal a wound,
Or weld a broken link,
The heart aches on, the link is gone—
All through "I didn't think."

I half believe that ugly sprite,
Bold, wicked "I don't care,"
In life's long run less harm has done
Because he is so rare,
And one can be so stern with him,
Can make the monster shrink;
But lack-a-day, what can we say,
To whining "Didn't think?"

This most unpleasant-imp of strife
Pursues us everywhere—
There's scarcely one whole day of life
He does not cause us care;
Small woes and great he brings the world,
Strong ships are forced to sink,
And trains from iron tracks are hurled
By stupid "Didn't think."

When brain is comrade to the heart,
And heart from soul draws grace,
"I didn't think" will quick depart
For lack of resting place
If from that great unselfish stream,
The Golden Rule, we drink,
We'll keep God's laws and have no cause
To say: "I didn't think."

A MERRY PURITAN.

The long Puritan service ended, four girls somewhat in advance of the congregation strolled homeward through the brilliant May sunshine.

"What a beautiful day!" cried Ruth Benning.

"Perfect," added Salome Endicott.
"It used to be like this in England," said little Peace Morley, wistfully.

"Why so silent, Dorothy?" asked Salome, addressing the fourth girl, who had not yet spoken.

Dorothy Penrhyn looked up quickly.
She was charmingly pretty, with black glossy hair and large, dark, mischievous eyes.

"Let us keep May day," she exclaimed with sudden energy.

"How can we?" asked Salome. "You

She went boldly down and opened the door. Capt. Winthrop, tall, dignified, with blue eyes and fair hair and beard, bowed low on seeing her.

"Will you enter?" said Dorothy, bracing herself for the interview.

"I called, Mistress Penrhyn," began
Capt. Winthrop, evidently in some confusion, "to see—"

"Yes," interrupted Dorothy; "I know.
I was expecting you. What are you going to do?"

"I cannot tell yet," he answered. "I must first consult—"

"What an idiotic proceeding!" cried Dorothy, with spirit. "Where was the harm in it, after all?"

"Harm?" repeated Capt. Winthrop, in perplexity.

"Yes, harm!" insisted Dorothy. "We really must have some amusement, you know."

"I don't think I understand," said
Winthrop, with a puzzled look.

"Why, didn't you come to—"

She paused, crimson with sudden shame.

G. A. BROWNE

H. B. SHERWOOD

came here.

"But we didn't come here of our own free will," returned Dorothy. "What harm can there be in a dance around a maypole? Why is everyone so afraid of a little enjoyment?"

"Of course you are jesting," said Ruth, seizing on the idea. "So, to continue the joke, I will ask, when and where is this celebration to occur?"

"In the training field at sunrise tomorrow," Dorothy answered, promptly. "Indeed, Ruth, I am not jesting."

Ruth and Salome smiled. Peace looked troubled.

"You can invite your sister to join us, Peace," Dorothy went on quickly. "and you others must ask your friends. I am really in earnest. But you mustn't tell anyone except the girls. Bring just as many as you can. We shall have at least one thoroughly good time."

Dorothy's enthusiasm was contagious. Her companions caught it in spite of themselves. When they parted at Ruth's gate they all, even Peace, had promised Dorothy to be ready at the appointed time for the forbidden pleasure.

The dawning of the following day found the girls and their friends assembled upon the training field just outside the primitive Boston settlement. They brought long linen strips for ribbons, and the slender trunk of a dead sapling served as maypole.

It was so early that no one was stirring. The newly risen sun smiled unheeded upon their bit of stolen revelry: upon the dresses brushing dew from the grass in the graceful dance; upon Dorothy Penrhyn, merriest of the group, with her laughter, her sparkling eyes, her delightful color and quick, airy movements, the grim Puritans forgotten as she joined in the gay pastime.

Suddenly came the sound of voices and of approaching footsteps. The girls ceased their dance in consternation. Then Salome Endicott remembered that this was the day for the monthly muster of soldiers under Capt. Roger Winthrop.

The revelers fled precipitately. Dorothy lingered only to tear the linen strips from the improvised maypole, then, trailing them after her, hastened down the sloping field in pursuit of her companions. She was not afraid of the young captain. She had met him often; but she had no wish to meet him under present circumstances.

Behind an alder group they paused for breath and consultation.

"Do you think they saw us?" asked Ruth Benning. "Capt. Winthrop is very strict in his ideas, they say."

Salome Endicott was out of temper from running. Most of the others were terrified by Ruth's words. Dorothy alone showed vexation at being interrupted.

"They might have waited till we finished," she said, in disgust. "It was too bad to spoil our sport in that fashion."

When the girls had reduced to order the chaos of ribbons they went home in some anxiety.

"I am so sorry for it all," Peace confessed to Dorothy the next day. "If we are found out what do you think the magistrates will do?"

"I neither know nor care," answered Dorothy, defiantly. "Send us back to England, I hope. I am going, anyway, as soon as I can."

"Why, Dorothy?"

"I am," repeated Dorothy.

"A vessel leaves the day after tomorrow," suggested Peace. "You can go in that."

"I'll do it," said the girl.

She had suddenly become discontented with Boston and with Puritan ways. She longed for England, for her grandfather's house, where she had lived till her parents brought her to America.

Her plans for the journey were soon made. The captain of the vessel was a friend of her father. Under his care she would sail directly for Southampton. She went to her room, and began resolutely packing her box. While she was mentally composing a note to be left for her parents, who were away from home, she heard a knock at the front door. Peeping out, with an ever-present fear of Indians, she saw Capt. Winthrop below.

"Perhaps he is coming to arrest me," she said to herself. "But I am not

"I came to see your father in regard to strengthening our defences," he said. "But you have raised my curiosity. What is it, Dorothy? Tell me."

"You won't betray me?" she asked, after a little hesitation.

"Certainly not."

"Well; then, we girls had a maypole dance in the training field just before muster."

"You danced! Oh, Dorothy!"

"Yes, You needn't attempt to punish me, for I am going to England, where there are no Puritans to spoil my pleasure. My box is packed. I shall leave at once."

"And what is to become of me?" asked Roger Winthrop, with a glance that made Dorothy look at him in a startled way, then cover her face with her hands.

Half an hour later, when everything had been satisfactorily arranged, Dorothy said, regretfully. "I suppose I must remain a Puritan after all, and never dance again, since you disapprove of it so. But," with an arch glance, "I have had one genuine celebration, and I shall never regret it, Roger, whatever you may think."

"I think I am the happiest man in the world," said the captain.

AQUARELLE.

A moorland margin of the sea
With gypsy roses overrun;
Above it all a blue sky free,
Where walks the golden sun.

Gray rocks, and dunes of silver sand,
Beyond the sail of purple shows;
And drowsily across the land,
The pine's fresh fragrance blows.

Here is the paradise of rest,
Of peace the pinnacle supreme;
Lie down upon the earth's warm breast
And yield you to her dream!

REPORTING.

The Old Reporter sat at his desk at midnight, clipping his work out of a file of Sunday edition with a big pair of shears. The Young Reporter, who had just turned in his account of "The Day at the Beaches—Bath Beach," stopped and gazed with envious eyes at the pile of clippings as it grew under the Old Reporter's skilful scissoring.

"So that was your story, was it?" exclaimed the Young Reporter, as a half-column slip came fluttering down. "Well, that accounts for it. Nobody but a man with a pull like yours could have got that yarn past old Crofton."

"Which yarn?" queried the Old Reporter.

"Oh, that fake about the bicyclist who always carried a lot of spare ball-bearings around with him, and was going somewhere with a shot gun, and was attacked by a bear, and loaded the ball-bearings into his shot-gun and killed the bear. I don't wonder that people distrust the newspapers if men of your standing in the profession are willing to write stuff like that for the sake of the few paltry dollars it will bring in. Can't you see that it is just such things as this that are making journalism a byword and a reproach?"

The Young Reporter was very much in earnest, as from afar his eye followed the relentless course of the copy-reader's blue pencil through his carefully prepared copy—"manuscript," he called it.

"My young friend," said the Old Reporter, "I admire your enthusiasm, and I approve your sentiments. It is just such a spirit as yours among the best of the younger men that will always tend to raise higher and higher the already lofty standard of what you are, however, certain of your statements to which I take exception. In the first place, journalism is not a profession; it is a trade, or a business. In the second place, I am not a journalist; I'm a reporter. In the third place, as to the paltry dollars, I'm not in the business for my health, nor for any other consideration than that which actuates men in other kinds of business.

"As to the story of which you complain, it is a fake, as you say; I confess it. But perhaps when you hear the true version of it you will think I was justified in making the changes that I did, and you will learn that it is not so much the things which a man puts in as the things which he leaves out that make the successful reporter.

"This is what really happened: The man's name was O'Grady, and he lived in Troy. He had borrowed a bicycle to go on a hunting trip through New England. He had a shotgun. This he carried slung to the frame in the manner adopted by military cyclists. But he had no luck. He travelled as far as Claremont, New Hampshire, without bagging so much as a robin. This filled him with disappointment, which he did not like, so he proceeded to substitute for it whiskey, which he did not like.

"While he was in this frame of mind darkness overtook him, a few miles out of the little village of Newport. The road was rough, and lay through thick woods.

"Suddenly O'Grady was horrified to see a large animal come out from the bushes by the road-side. A moment's glance was sufficient to convince him that he was confronted by a bear of unusual dimensions. He was startled, but not surprised, as he had been informed by a number of the leading citizens of Newport, whom he had met at the tavern, that at least several bears had been committing depredations recently in the neighborhood.

"O'Grady was a quick thinker, and like a flash he thought he would stop. With O'Grady to think was to act and he applied the brake with such force that he was enabled to dismount without assistance over the handle-bars. While he was still in the air he remembered that he had left his shotgun strapped to his machine. So the instant he landed he ran back to get it.

"He rapidly undid the fastenings, though he realized too well that the bird-shot with which his fowling-piece was loaded would offer but an inadequate obstacle to the onslaught of bruin, which continued to approach him, uttering weird cries.

"He wished that he had brought some rifle balls for just such an emergency. Then, like lightning, the association of the two ideas of 'balls' and 'bears' made him think of the ball-bearings of the bicycle. In a second he had his wrench out and the fork off, and was ramming sixteen finest tool steel balls down on the charge, with a bit of tire tape for a wad.

"Not an instant too soon. The bear was now close upon him, and throwing his piece to his shoulder, O'Grady took hasty aim and fired. To his unspeakable relief, the shots took effect, and with a plaintive 'Moo' the bear fell to the ground. At the same moment a light flashed out from a window to his right, and O'Grady saw that his adventure had taken place directly in front of a large farm-house sheltered by some noble elms. A second glance revealed the fact that what he had in the excitement of the moment mistaken for a bear, was a fine Holstein heifer, which was tethered to the hitching-post with a long rope.

"The sounds of men's voices, and the barking of a number of dogs, which followed closely upon the sound of the shot and the appearance of the light, caused O'Grady to think that he had better be getting along to some place from which he could send his explanations by mail.

"Only two methods of escape occurred to him—one way was on foot and the other by bicycle. But on foot he would be too nearly on even terms with possible pursuers, and it was obviously not possible to ride his bicycle without its ball-bearings. With rare presence of mind, O'Grady whipped out his knife, and rushing to the dead does not lie to her. If she looks carefully and owns the truth to herself, she will acknowledge that it shows to her, as it shows to others, a face full of the ugliness of suffering and pain. If a woman wants her mirror to reflect a pain-free face she should take proper care of her womanly self. She should see that the organs that are distinctly feminine are kept free from weakness and disease. By this means only can a woman remain fresh-looking and attractive.

Women may erase from their faces the lines of suffering by using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Over 90,000 women have testified in writing to its marvelous merits. It acts directly on the womanly organs. It makes them strong and healthy. It cures all weakness and disease. It allays inflammation, soothes pain, and calms and steadies and invigorates the pain-racked nerves. It prepares for wifehood and motherhood. It does away with the discomforts of the expectant period. It insures baby's health and makes its advent easy and almost painless. All good druggists sell it.

"I am going to write and tell you the benefits I have received from taking your medicines," writes Mrs. J. B. Clough, Box 203, Lisbon, Grafton Co., N. Hampshire. "I am the mother of a nice baby four and a half months old. He is a perfect child and weighs about eighteen pounds. If you remember I wrote you about a year ago about my condition. I cannot give too much praise to your 'Favorite Prescription' as it saved me a great deal of suffering. I got along remarkably well, this being my first baby."

"Knowledge is power." In a thorough knowledge of the human body lies the power that will at last stamp out weakness of the body and mediocrity of mentality. Dr. Pierce has taken a long look into the future through his "Common Sense Medical Adviser." It is full of just such knowledge as will do the family the most good. This book of over 1000 pages and finely illustrated has had an unprecedented sale. About 300,000 copies have been sold at $1.50 per volume. Now it can be had in paper covers for 31 cents in one-cent stamps. In fine cloth for 50 stamps, customs and postage pre-paid. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE GOVERNMENT OF THE DOMINION.

THE CANADIAN CONSTITUTION AND HOW IT WORKS.

The Powers of the Dominion and of the Several Provinces The Senate and the House of Commons The Governor-General and His Powers.

The Canadian system of Government is a Federal Union, having a general or central government controlling all matters essential to the general development, the permanency and the unity of the whole Dominion and a number of local or provincial Governments, having the control and management of certain matters naturally and conveniently falling within their defined jurisdiction, while each Government is administered in accordance with the British system of parliamentary institutions.

Canada is consequently a semi-independent power. The powers vested in the Parliament of Canada are set forth in the Confederation Act, which provides that the Queen, with the advice and consent of the Senate and House of Commons, may make laws for the peace, order and good government of Canada in relation to all matters not coming within the class of subjects assigned by this Act exclusively to the Legislatures of the provinces, and for greater certainty it is declared that the exclusive legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada extends to all matters coming within the following classes of subjects: The public debt and property; the regulation of trade and commerce; the raising of money by any mode or system of taxation; the borrowing of money on public credit; postal service; the census and statistics; militia, military and naval service and defence; the fixing of and providing for the salaries and allowances of civil and other officers of the Government of Canada; beacons, buoys, lighthouses and Sable Island; navigation and shipping; quarantine and the establishment and maintenance of marine hospitals, sea coast and inland fisheries; territories between a province and any British or foreign country or between two provinces; currency and coinage; banking, incorporation of banks; and the issue of paper money; savings banks; weights and measures; bills of Senators are appointed by the Governor-General under the Great Seal upon the recommendation of his Council. They hold office for life, and must be of the full age of 30 years, and have real and personal property worth $4,000 over and above all liabilities.

The Senators from Quebec must reside in the electoral divisions for which they are appointed or have their property qualifications therein; in the case of other provinces, Senators are only required to reside and have their property qualification within the province limits. They must be natural born subjects of Her Majesty or become naturalized. The Speaker of the Senate is appointed by the Governor-General in Council. Fifteen members of the Senate, including the Speaker, constitute a quorum. Questions are decided by a majority of votes, the Speaker always having a vote, and when the voices are equal the decision is deemed to be in the negative.

No Senator can hold a seat in the House of Commons, nor can he sit in any Legislature of the several provinces, excepting in the case of the Legislative Council of Quebec.

Bills can originate in the Senate, excepting money or revenue bills, in which cases the action of the Senate is confined by usage to their assent, which is justified only by extraordinary circumstances. At present the Senate consists of eighty-one members, twenty-four each from Ontario and Quebec, ten each from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, four each from Prince Edward Island and Manitoba, three from British Columbia, and two from the Northwest Territories.

The House of Commons, which is elected for a term of five years, unless sooner dissolved, consists at present of 215 members. This number is fixed under the provisions of the Act of Confederation, and the representation is re-arranged after every decennial census by Act of Parliament, the basis being that Quebec is a ways to have 65 representatives, and each of the other provinces such a number as will give the same proportion of representatives to its population as the number 65 bears to the population of Quebec, as ascertained by the census. British Columbia, however, is never to have less than six members.

Members of both Houses are paid an indemnity at the rate of $10 a day, if the session is less than thirty days, and a maximum amount of $1000 if more than thirty days, $8 a day being deducted for each day of absence (beyond a certain number of days fixed at each session) if the House is sitting, unless the absence is caused by sickness after he has been in attendance. They also receive a mileage allowance of ten cents a mile going and coming.

The salary of each Speaker is $4000 a year.

When a member of the House of Commons is called to the Government as head of a department, he must at once resign his seat and seek re-election.

NICKNAMES FOR MONEY.

Small Pieces Bear Odd Designations—Some of Them Wongfully So.

Few people realize that every piece of money has a nickname. It has, however, and some of the names are very odd. The $100 note has but one nickname, but it is exceedingly appropriate as well as dignified. It needs no more, for there are thousands of persons in this country who have never seen a note of this denomination, says The New York Journal.

Everybody has seen small change, though, and the commonness of this species of money has suggested scores of sobriquets, appropriate and the reverse, grave and gay, effusively funny and humorously pathetic. The "nickel" as a name, was suggested by the common idea that this metal entered largely into its composition. The coin, it is a misnomer, as a piece contains 75 per cent. of copper and only 25 per cent. of the metal which gave it a name.

"Car-fares," a slang name for the same piece, illustrates the universality of this method of transportation, while "chicken feed," as a name not only for 5-cent pieces, but also for other small change, undoubtedly came from rural districts. "Flipper-up" suggests a frequent use to which the piece is placed in certain circles. "Pansies" and "pieayunes" indicate the outpouring more pretended than real into which our smallest coins have fallen. The latter name, like the latter piece, is a morsel of history not familiar to general readers. A "Pieayune" now used as a synonym for the smallest value expressed in money terms was once the name of a special coin. It was worth about one half cent and at one time, during our colonial days, when all sorts of coins passed current at all sorts of valuations, circulated in

Good Blood

Is essential to health. Every nook and corner of the system is reached by the blood, and on its quality the condition of every organ depends. Good blood means strong nerves, good digestion, robust health. Impure blood means scrofula, dyspepsia, rheumatism, catarrh or other diseases. The surest way to have good blood is to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine purifies, vitalizes, and enriches the blood, and sends the elements of health and strength to every nerve, organ and tissue. It creates a good appetite, gives refreshing sleep and cures that tired feeling. Remember.

EMPLE GREENHOUSE.

Plans and Specifications For a Three-Quarter Span Structure.

The plans as here given represent a 3-4-span house, and will assist anyone to make a handsome greenhouse.

The size of the greenhouse is 12 feet wide by 20 feet long, and the boiler house six feet square. The glass used in the roof is 14 inches wide.

The greenhouse can be made with either wood or iron rafters and purlins. Iron is the better, as it makes a lighter house and lasts much longer than the wood. The rafters are made fast to iron foot pieces that extend into the ground, and run up to the ridge, which is also of iron; these are capped with cypress, in which to bed the glass. The ridges also receive a cap of the same wood. The sash bars are made of cypress.

The inside of the house can be sealed with cypress, then builder's paper should be put on, and the outside covered with novelty siding.

The ventilation shown on the plan is continuous and 30 inches wide, and is placed next to the ridge. It should be operated by a ventilating apparatus, such as can be purchased from any maker of greenhouse material.

The house is arranged with three benches or beds—one extending from the door along the front and end being two feet six inches wide, one down the center of the same height and three feet wide, and one against the back wall two feet wide. The back bench should be elevated, which will require the walk to be elevated also, which should be about the height of the middle bench, the supports for which will answer for the walk, by extending them through to the back wall.

The sides should be made of cypress and the bottom either of cypress or hemlock. The supports can be made of iron or cypress. If made of iron they will last a long time, the only thing requiring to be renewed being the sides and bottoms from time to time.

A boiler six feet square is attached to the greenhouse at one end. The roof can be made to slope to the back. There should be provided also a pit of sufficient depth to allow the top of the boiler to be below the flow pipes in the greenhouse. If this is not convenient the heating can be done without it, but the circulation would not be as good as if the boiler be as suggested. The bottom of the pit should be cemented and be supplied with drainage.

The heating can be accomplished by hot water heating pipes 3 1/2 inches in hider, found that all sixteen shots had taken effect in the animal's heart. With a few dexterous cuts he removed that organ entire, and hurried back to his wheel, extracting the balls as he ran. Quickly replacing them, he re-adjusted the fork, reslung his gun, mounted his machine, and was off, just as an excited group of farmers appeared upon the scene. Fortunately an angry dispute between two of the men, as to whether the one who had just sold the heifer or the one who had just bought it should bear the loss and follow the bovidae, enabled O'Grady to get a start that soon placed him out of harm's reach.

MASSAGE BY MACHINE.

An Ingenious Device by Which the Electric Current is Applied.

That there are still some new things under the sun is proved, says the New York Tribune, by the appearance recently of an ingeniously devised instrument that makes possible for the first time in medical annals anything like a satisfactory massaging of the nose, throat and ear. It is only within the last few years that the value of massage as applied to the mucous membranes of these organs has been appreciated, and not until the French savants took the subject up as a matter of fact was much interest felt in it. Even when the excellence of the treatment was admitted, it was almost impracticable, since the massage had to be "manual" and skilled operators were rare. The new instrument, invented by an American and a part of the outcome of the recent delving into electricity for medical purposes, solves the problem by working almost automatically and requiring little else than simple guidance.

It is electrovibratory in its operation; that is, a button and a spring work so as to turn on and shut off an electric current with great rapidity. This mechanism causes a vibration of the slender rod of metal, on the farther end of which is a button coming directly into contact with the mucous membranes. Different shaped probes can be attached as occasion requires. What the new instrument achieves is extreme rapidity in its vibrations, their coming at regular intervals and the uniform intensity of the strokes. Without electricity these three conditions cannot be realized.

The instrument is extremely simple in construction. It is so light that it is easily held in the hand. A short cylinder or box holds two magnets, a rod designed to move forward and backward running between them, ending in front of the detachable probe. At its rear end is a metal plate, which is movable. On the neck of the apparatus is an ivory button, which, upon the pressure of the forefinger of the physician, closes the circuit. The metal plate is at that instant drawn forward by the magnet and the rod likewise. A fraction of a second later the metal plate reaches its foremost point, and the contact being interrupted is thrown back by a spring. The button being still held down by the finger, the circuit is immediately made again, and vibration follows vibration in swift order.

The operator generally illumines the parts he is about to work on, though this is not absolutely necessary. For the most effective treatment the probe is placed not at right angles to the place to be treated, but at an acute angle. Placed in this way it does not tap, but rubs.

The seat of Government is fixed at Ottawa until the Queen otherwise directs.

The chief executive government and authority in Canada is vested in the Queen, in whom is also vested the chief command of the militia and of all naval and military forces in Canada. Her Majesty is represented by a Governor-General appointed by the Queen-in-Council, but paid by Canada, whose term of office lasts for five years. The Governor-General's salary is fixed at £10,000 sterling and forms the third charge upon the consolidated revenue of the country. The Governor-General is bound by the terms of his commission, and governs under the advice of a Council of Ministers, known as the Privy Council of Canada, which is responsible to Parliament. As the acting head of the Executive, he summons, prorogues and dissolves Parliament, and assents to or reserves bills in the name of Her Majesty, but in the discharge of these and other Executive duties acts entirely by and with the advice of his Council. Even in matters of imperial interest affecting Canada he consults with his Council and submits their views to the authorities in England. The royal prerogative of mercy in capital cases is administered pursuant to the advice of the Ministry.

As the members of the Council hold office only while they retain the confidence of the House of Commons the majority necessarily sit in that branch, though there is always a certain representation in the Senate. An Administration when defeated on an appeal to the country, usually retires without waiting for the assembling of Parliament.

The Parliament of Canada consists of, 1st, the Queen; 2nd, an Upper House, called the Senate; and 3rd, a Lower House, called the House of Commons. The privileges and immunities of the two Houses are defined by

The "bit," now only a mofey of account and most familiar in the well known form, "two bits," a synonym for the 25-cent piece, was also at one time a coin, equal in value to one-half the Spanish pistareen, and worth a little more than 1 cent. When the English shilling and the Spanish pistareen were supplanted by our familiar "quarter," the names remained long after the coins had disappeared. "Shilling" has now finally disappeared from us, save along the Canadian border, where prices are frequently made in both kinds of money, but the "bit" we have still with us.

The Cooking-Tree of San Pablo.

The historic old laurel tree, known to the earliest Spanish settlers about San Pablo as the cooking-tree, marks the spot where many of the Indian and early Spanish festivities were celebrated. Under its great branches Spaniards danced the fandango after a tasty meal, of which many have been cooked in the hollow trunk of this famous tree.

The trunk at the base is about six feet high and about twenty feet high, tapering toward the top, at which there is a naturally formed hole as an outlet for the smoke arising from the fire built inside. The cavity inside is four feet across, giving plenty of room for a person to move about with the grace and skill of a French cook.

In the '50s this remarkable tree was in all its splendor, and was the admiration of the old Spaniards and others, who loved it for its beauty, grace and utility. Previous to this the Indians gathered under its spreading branches of thick foliage, which afforded them shelter on rainy days and an admirable natural kitchen.

The tree marks the place where many councils of the Bay tribe of Indians held conventions. Around its base are many heaps of clam shells, evidence of the big appetites of by-gone days, when clam roasts were the pet dish of the Indians. Many skulls and other relics have also been unearthed here.—San Francisco Call.

THAYER FOR DECEMBER.

The Veteran Fruit Cultivator, on Who Should Grow Berries.

Who should grow berries? First of all, farmers everywhere, for family use. Farmers must grow berries or do without. No one can grow them so cheaply as he. They may be produced ready for picking at two cents per quart. The farmer saves cost of picking, packing, boxing, crating, freight, express and profits of growers. He gets them at first cost fresh from the vines and to the extent of his own family, has the best market in the world—a home market. He can select the best land and location on his own farm, and is sure of a profit with half a crop.

Farmers can never have ideal homes without the fruit garden. It teaches the lessons of intensified farming, and results in better tillage, large crops, better stock and improved methods in every way. Good gardens and poor farms never kept company long. The growing of berries for family use is easily done. The growing of berries largely, and selling them in good market, requires considerable skill and a special business tact. Only those who have good location, good market, and a taste for the business should attempt it. Many small farmers so situated are making a success by commencing moderately and increasing acreage from season to season, as experience warrants.

Berries should be grown by owners of all village homes, and acreage property in city and village may be profitably used for that purpose. The market gardener selling his own products can often make an acre or two of berries very profitable. They are suitable companions for their vegetable friends, and sell well together.

The business or professional man, almost broken with care, may recover health and strength in the pleasant walk of horticulture. It is restful to both mind and body. Many women dependent on their own efforts are securing substantial aid from their garden; berries and flowers thrive best under the gentle touch of woman. Many a bright boy may receive his first incentive to business and earn his first money by growing berries or vegetables. Give them a patch of ground and encourage them in this work. The amateur growing berries for pleasure, also gets close to the heart of nature and in common with every worker of the soil may receive her smile.—M. A. Thayer.

ANGUS McLEOD'S MURDERER MAKES A CONFESSION.

John Troy, a Convict in the Kingston Penitentiary. Did the Deed—He is Serving a Life Sentence for Attempted Murder—Roger's Clever Work—Troy will be Brought to Napanee for Trial. The News Causes Great Excitement in Napanee.

On Friday of last week the news was flashed across the wire that a convict in the Kingston penitentiary had confessed to the murder of Angus McLeod. This intelligence as might be expected created a turmoil of excitement in Napanee, and Kingston papers were eagerly awaited for in hopes that some additional particulars might be gleaned from them. At 4:10 the Whig and News arrived and everybody was anxious to secure a copy. The Whig made no reference to the matter, while a column and a half article in the News revealed nothing new, except the ability of the reporter of that paper to fill space. The morbid curiosity of the public when anything relating to murder is up for discussion soon exhausted the 100 extra copies of the News which were forwarded to town, and 500 copies could have as readily been disposed of.

The intelligence that the murderer of Angus McLeod had at last been run to earth was gratifying to the people of Napanee for more reasons than one. Apart from the natural wish of our citizens to have the mystery cleared and punishment meted out to the dastardly assassin, was the desire to have the unjust suspicion directed against several well-connected residents of the town removed and their innocence of having any part in the matter established beyond peradventure. Ever since the dark and fearful night of September 14th, 1893, when Angus McLeod was ushered into eternity by a bullet from a revolver in the hands of a midnight assassin the affair has remained shrouded in mystery and it stands as a tribute to Detective Roger's skill and perseverance that the mystery is now about to be cleared up and the guilt placed where it properly belongs. The confession made by Troy vindicates the position taken by THE EXPRESS at the time of the murder, and maintained throughout, that the crime was the work of an outsider and a cool, desperate and adept hand at the business. This theory was not received with much favor by a great many people in town, however. Quite a number believed it was the work of a resident of the town and one well acquainted with the house and its surroundings. The fact that the assassin shot to kill only strengthened the belief that it was a local man and was advanced as evidence that he feared identification, and committed murder to hide a lesser crime. Some advanced the theory that the crime was committed from motives of revenge, with the view of robbery thrown around it to hide the real object and throw the police off the track. As all these conjectures have now received their quietus by the confession of the principal in the affair it is unnecessary to dwell upon them further here.

HOW McLEOD WAS MURDERED.

A brief account of the circumstances surrounding the murder of Angus McLeod will perhaps prove interesting. On the evening of September 14th, 1893, three tough looking tramps arrived in Napanee and took up their quarters in a large barn the property of Mr. Gibson. The men were professional burglars and had been playing their vocations in the towns along the line. Troy, the leader, proposed an excursion down town, but the other two men complained of feeling fatigued and refused to accompany him. Nothing daunted he started out alone, and effected an entrance into McLeod's house by cutting out one of the bars at the bottom of the blind. This enabled him to put in his hand and open the shutter. The window sash was already raised, and propped up with a piece of wood so that ingress was easy. There being no one in the house at the time the burglar coolly lit the gas and proceeded to take an inventory of his surroundings. After having inspected things to his satisfaction he secreted himself and calmly awaited the return of the inmates. Mr. and Mrs. McLeod and their little boy Charlie were in attendance at a missionary meeting in the Presbyterian church and returned home about 10:30 o'clock. Mrs. McLeod was treasurer of the missionary society and had received a trifle over $20 that evening, which was placed in a small hand satchel. Mrs. McLeod retired to bed about a quarter to eleven, but Mr. McLeod sat up for some emphatically that Troy was the murderer. He said that three of the gang were in Napanee on the night of the murder. Two of them remained in a barn just outside the town while Troy went down town and committed the deed. Armed with these facts Rogers went to Troy and accused him with the murder and after some hesitation the convict broke down and made a clean breast of the matter. The third man is in prison in Jacksonville and will be brought back for the trial which will take place at Napanee in the spring. Troy's confession duly signed and witnessed has been submitted to the Attorney-General's Department.

Detective Rogers was in Napanee on Thursday evening of last week and had an interview with Mrs. McLeod and S. O. Warner, County Crown Attorney. The evidence is now quietly gathering up to be used at the trial. He is endeavoring to locate an old tam o' shanter hat which was worn by the murderer in place of the one left at McLeod's house.

While some view Troy's confession in a skeptical manner, those acquainted with the facts believe it to be genuine. In his confession the convict described accurately the interior of the house and also referred to the loosing of his hat. One reason assigned for Troy's confession is that he is determined not to spend his full term in prison and would rather hang. The authorities are very reticent on the subject and no authentic information is forthcoming. Everything will come out at the trial, at the Spring Assizes, and things that now appear strange will be satisfactorily cleared up.

THE CROWN ATTORNEY INTERVIEWED.

On Thursday an EXPRESS representative had an interview with Mr. S. O. Warner, County Crown Attorney. Mr. Warner while regretting that he was not in a position to give the details in connection with the matter said he entertained no doubt whatever of the genuineness of the confession and that the murderer would ultimately be brought to justice. The authorities regretted that the matter had leaked out before they were in a position to go on with the trial.

In his confession Troy told things which can be corroborated, and which have never been made public. This was one of the reasons for keeping the matter a secret as it was thought if the confession became public property it might retard and hamper the authorities in their efforts to complete the chain of corroborative evidence which they were collecting. The fact that Troy in his confession disclosed circumstances surrounding the murder which had not been given to the public but which were known to the authorities alone entirely does away with the contention that the confession was the clever ruse of an ingenious criminal who had become acquainted with the facts of the McLeod murder through the newspapers and used the knowledge thus acquired in order to secure the novelty of a public trial.

Mr. Warner said he had some of the bullets which had been discharged by the murderer on the night in question, and the old felt hat he left behind, in his possession. For the past few weeks he had been acting in conjunction with Inspector Rogers in gathering evidence but the result of their labors he was not at liberty to disclose. In reply to the question: "If Troy was brought to Napanee and pleaded guilty would it be necessary for the crown to submit evidence and establish his guilt in order to secure a conviction?" Mr. Warner believed the Crown would be obliged to put in corroborative evidence. He could not call to mind a precedent or parallel case just at the moment, but pointed out the necessity of the Crown having strong corroborative evidence in case the prisoner went back on his story. Mr. Warner said that Inspector Rogers was still at work and actively engaged in collecting evidence against Troy. The Crown Attorney had no doubt but that the man would be brought to justice and pay the penalty of his crime.

Kingston had a visit from a ghost last week. Not to be outdone by its rival, Belleville turns up this week with a real live article in the ghost line, also. The Kingston ghost confines its operations to the penitentiary and is supposed to be doing time for robbing graveyards. The Belleville article is an escaped lunatic, and was caught red-handed on its way to the Ontario office with a letter to the editor on What Must We do to be Saved.

The proprietors have been solicited to have a children's Carnival at the rink, and have agreed to do so. It will take place on Saturday afternoon, Feb. 27th, weather permitting. The reason for having it in the afternoon is the objection many parents have to their children being out in the evening, and on other days than Saturday the small folks are at school. There will be numerous prizes, and masquers will be admitted free.

B. C. Steele, under whose direction the work has been carried on, left on Monday for New York, accompanied by Mrs. Steele and daughter. Just why this course has been adopted is somewhat uncertain, but judging by appearances the matter will probably remain as at present for a time at least.

The alleged horse thief was brought to Napanee on Wednesday and allowed to go, as it was clearly established the constable had got hold of the wrong man.

HEART PAIN.

Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart Defies the Most Piteous Pains—No Matter How Long Standing the Trouble, It Masters Disease in Half an Hour, and in the Case of John Crow Aves Bitterly Cured Heart Disease of Ten Years' Standing—Here's His Testimony Unqualified.

John Crow, son of Mr. George Crow, farmer, near the village of Tara, Ont., writes: "I was alarmingly afflicted with palpitation and enlargement of the heart for nearly ten years. I doctored with the best physicians and tried numerous remedies with very little benefit. In our local papers I noticed Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart advertised, and I determined to give it a trial. Inside of half an hour I had relief. I have taken about five bottles, and feel to-day that I am as well as ever I was. I am completely cured."

eleven, but Mr. McLeod sat up for some time reading the papers and smoking. After he retired the burglar started in to secure the plunder. He rifled the satchel containing the missionary money, taking the silver and bills amounting to about $22, and disdaining the fifty cents in coppers which it contained. The robber then visited the sideboard and helped himself to some cake and a bottle of gin. He partook freely of the gin, and then proceeded to ransack the house. He visited every room in the house with the exception of the bedroom where Mr. and Mrs. McLeod slept. Mr. McLeod was awakened by the noise made by the burglar in rummaging through the drawers and got up. He grasped a water pitcher and ran out into the hall. He came back into the bedroom in a state of agitation and told his wife to cry out. McLeod lifted the pillows of the bed and walked backward and forward in the room crying, "What am I to do, What am I to do." Mrs. McLeod sprang out of bed and went to the centre of the bay window and raised the sash. In her excitement she let it fall. McLeod started to leave the room, when the burglar cried out "If you move another step I will shoot you." McLeod then closed with the burglar, who fired, the bullet passing through the upper part of the chest on the left side, in a downward direction, through the lung and striking the eighth or ninth rib. The burglar fired again to keep back pursuit and when he reached the bottom of the stairs, he fired the third shot. In the scuffle with McLeod his hat had fallen off and he decamped without it. He made for Gibson's barn, where he acquainted his companions with what had happened. They jumped an east bound freight train and were many miles away from the scene when morning broke. The burglar did not visit the house with the intention of killing McLeod, but went prepared to shoot if necessary. There was no premeditation and therefore no trouble taken to throw the police off the scent. This accounts for the complete absence of clues. Many a murderer has placed the halter around his neck by the pains taken to cover up his tracks.

In the McLeod murder everything was shrouded in mystery and the police were completely thrown off the track. The old felt hat left by the robber was the only clue, and this was worked for all it was worth. A Kingston man, named Somerville, was dragged before the magistrate on the strength of it, and honorably acquitted. The opinion that the crime was the work of a local man gained ground. Detective Rogers deprecated this opinion however. He maintained that the deed had been committed by a professional and a non-resident. The words made use of by him in an interview in 1894, that the murderer of Angus McLeod would never be brought to justice except on his own confession seems now about to be verified.

Local detectives went to work on the resident theory and as a result Barney King was brought to trial and two well-connected young men were placed in custody as his accomplices. The case against King fell through there being no evidence to substantiate it. After this the matter was allowed to rest and the McLeod case became regarded as one of the unfathomable murders which would not out.

There was one man however, who did not give up the chase. Rogers, the clever and indomitable sleuth hound, who never gives up a case has been quietly working up the evidence and as a result of his labors the innocent are raised from under a cloud and the guilt placed where it belongs.

All credit is due to Detective Rogers. The obstacles in his way appeared unsurmountable but by patience and perseverance he has ferreted out the guilty party and achieved a great triumph. The material at his disposal was of the most meagre and this but adds to his achievement.

John Troy, the self-confessed murderer of Angus McLeod, is a convict in the Kingston penitentiary undergoing a twenty years sentence for attempted murder. Troy was stealing a ride on a train, and the conductor attempted to put him off. Troy drew a revolver and fired three shots at the conductor wounding him, but not fatally. For this he was sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary. He proved a very ugly prisoner and sometime ago it was found necessary to place him in the ward for solitary confinement. The manner in which Detective Rogers extorted the confession from Troy was remarkably clever. A confederate of Troy's named Hughes is now serving a term in the Kingston penitentiary, which expires in less than a year. Rogers received a clue that Troy or some of his chums were connected with the murder. He went to Hughes and accused him of the murder, assumingly on the authority of Troy. Hughes got angry

A Great Meeting.

On Monday evening last the Napanee Horticultural Society gave an entertainment in the town hall. The programme was excellent in every way, and the platform was decorated with a display of flowers in bloom, lent by George Lloyd of the Piety Hill green houses, and by members. We congratulate the lady president, Mrs. Wilkison, on the great success of the meeting. The musical part of the programme was excellent, and was rendered by Miss Bennett, Mrs. Dennis Daly, Miss Lineau, Mrs. Burrett, Mrs. Herrington, Miss Ward, Mrs. McNaughton, Mrs. Orr Herring. Prof. Craig, of the Dominion Experimental farm, gave a very interesting and instructive address on the A. B. C. of window gardening, as a result of which we expect to see a large increase in the number of house plants, and a more successful culture of the same. All those in attendance, and the hall was packed to the doors, learned something about the proper treatment of house plants, and which window, east, west, north, or south, best suited particular kinds. The geranium was especially recommended for indoors as being the most satisfactory to blossom and thrive under varying conditions. There was a question drawer, but the most interesting query to many of the ladies, namely, "Are you a married man?" was left unanswered.

AGRAND SUCCESS. A FINE EXHIBITION OF PRETTY COSTUMES.

The first carnival of the season was held in the skating and curling rink on Friday evening last under circumstances the reverse of propitious. It took place during the progress of one of the worst storms that has visited us this winter and although this undoubtedly kept a large number of spectators and masquers, who would otherwise have been present, away, still there was a good crowd in attendance and despite the evident hostility of the clerk of the weather the carnival was a pronounced success. The skating was confined to the curling rink, which was a blaze of light and beauty. The costumes were of a high order and it was a difficult matter to discriminate amongst them. All the lady masquers merited a prize, for their costumes were really tasty and beautiful, and there was very little choice between them. The 47th, Batt. Band enlivened the proceedings with choice music. The prizes were awarded by ballot, all present being eligible to vote, and resulted as follows:

- 1—Best couple skaters, lady and gentleman, in costume, pair lady's skates and cardigan jacket.—Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Ross.
- 2—Best lady skater, in costume, pair satin slippers and bottle perfume.—Miss Carrie Williams.
- 3—Second best lady skater, in costume, lady's camee belt clasp and bottle perfume.—Mrs. Chas. Ross.
- 4—Best lady masque, half dozen cabinet photos (winner in masque), silk handkerchief, and bottle perfume.—Miss Belle Pollard.
- 5—Second best lady masque, pair lady's overboes and vase.—Miss Annie Lafferty.
- 6—Best gentleman skater, in costume, pair gold studs and silk necktie.—E. McLaughlin.
- 7—Second best gentleman skater, in costume, box of cigars.—Wm. Smith.
- 8—Best gentleman masque, half dozen cabinet photos (winner in masque), and pair winter gloves.—Chas. Ross.
- 9—Second best gentleman masque, cigarette holder and foot warmer.—Bruce Gordon.

Mrs. Judge Wilkison acted as directress in her usual efficient manner, assisted by Mr. Jas. E. Herring and Mr. Wm. Smith. The following gentlemen contributed the prizes: Messrs. Lahey & McKenty, Boyle & Son, Haines & Lockett, Harry Hunter, J. L. Hayes, Wilson Bros., Smith & Bro., D. J. Hogan, W. A. Rose, J. S. Hulett, J. F. Smith, W. Mowat, W. S. Detlor, Herring & Sons, The Robinson Co'y, J. J. Perry, F. Chinneke, W. G. Wilson, Jno. Pollard.

THE MASQUERS.

Mrs. E. H. Baines, as a pop corn girl, was very prettily and becomingly attired. Mrs. D. McNaughton and Miss B. Grange, as Mellie's Food Babies, were admired by all. Their placards announced that they were "Raised entirely on Mellie's Food—Nit."

Mrs. Burritt, made an admirable Gipsy Minstrel and was the cynosure of all eyes. Miss Dora Hulett, Good Luck, had a very pretty costume and looked charming.

She—Fred, why don't you ask father for my hand to-day?

Fred—I'm afraid to do it to-day. Wait until to-morrow and I'll buy a bicycle exactly like his.

The Reason.

"Tell me, Oscar," she said as she suddenly removed her weight from his aching shoulder, "why are you going to marry me?"

"Why—er—you see," he stammered in reply.

"Speak right up, Oscar," she continued. "It's not on account of my father's wealth, is it?"

"Why, certainly not."

"And you're not marrying me because no one else will have you?"

"Well, I rather—"

"Then why is it, Oscar? Give me a truthful answer upon your honor as a gentleman."

"Can you bear the plain truth?" he asked, looking at her seriously.

"I—I will try."

"You won't faint or cry out, I hope?"

"N—no, I will be brave."

"Then, I'm going to marry you, darling, because I want you to be my wife!"

And she actually refused to kiss him for over sixty seconds.

THREE WEEKS IN AGONY.

Inflammatory Rheumatism so Acute He Could Not Attend to His Daily Duties—Lived Three Weeks in Agonizing Pain when that "Good Samaritan" of all Cures, South American Rheumatic Cure, Passed His Way—It Helped in a Few Hours, and Speedily Cured—Cost 75 Cents.

Mr. E. A. Norton, a well-known citizen of Grimsby, Ont. was severely attacked with inflammatory rheumatism some 20 years ago—after a time he recovered, but five or six weeks ago the dread disease returned so violently that he had to give up work. For nearly three weeks he lay in bed suffering terrible agony. Another resident of the town who had been cured by South American Rheumatic Cure persuaded him to try it, and to his great surprise after using the medicine but one week he was so far recovered as to go about town. From the first dose taken he felt marked improvement, and to-day he is most enthusiastic in singing its praises. No case too severe for South American Rheumatic Cure to check in six hours, and cure permanently. Sold by A. W. Grange & Bro.

On Monday night between the boards of the Campbell House and Paisley House. For two years in succession the Campbell House has succeeded in turning down the Paisley House, and again they have nipped the aspirations of that hostility in the bud. Considerable improvement in the play of the teams over former years was noticeable, and at times the work narrowly approached being brilliant. The teams lined up as follows:

CAMPBELL HOUSE.	PAISLEY HOUSE.
Geo. A. Thompson, goal.....	Ed. Douglas Smith,.....
W. B. Haines,.....	W. B. Haines,.....
G. A. Thompson, cover point.....	C. Dewey,.....
M. Normie,.....	W. Durand,.....
F. McRadford,.....	W. Panton,.....
Thos. Diamond,.....	C. Lonsborough,.....
Dr. Bradshaw,.....	R. Lawson,.....
Referee—Geo. Harrison.

The play throughout was fast, and the players hot and desperate. Radford and Thompson, for the Campbell House, distinguished themselves and won the plaudits of the gods, who were perched on the outside of the fence. The Campbell House scored 3 goals, while the Paisley House only succeeded in placing the puck between the stakes twice. Two of the Campbell House goals were made from long lifts, the third being scored by a grand rush by Radford, who captured the puck, passed the forward line, eluded the defence men and taking the puck in front of the goal deliberately shot it through. Smith at point put up a great game and saved many a score. The members of both teams were made the recipients of several large and beautifully colored scars on their faces and other portions of their anatomy.

Our Boys Won

The West Ward hockey club, of Napanee, went up to Deseronto on Saturday and trimmed a team of that town by 4 goals to 2. These players composed the West Ward team: F. McCoy, P. Crossley, B. Briggs, Harry Finkle, Arthur Cornell, R. Embury, Tom Lafferty.

NOTES.

Pickton hockey team has defaulted to Napanee. Comment is unnecessary.

Last week the Trenton-Napanee match was postponed indefinitely, and the Belleville-Napanee match was arranged to be played at Belleville last evening. On Tuesday the Napanee team received word from Belleville that they would not play until Napanee played its match with Trenton. Our boys wired back that they would be on hand Thursday, and if Belleville refused to play they would claim the match by default. Yesterday afternoon the Belleville team asked to have the match postponed as their ice was unfit to play on. The request was granted.

The genial proprietor of the Campbell House, Mr. Hugh Milling, has extended an invitation to the Paisley House hockey team, the Campbell House team, and the town hockey team, and a number of their friends, to dine with him at the Campbell House, on Monday evening. As Hugh never does anything by halves this will no doubt prove one of the most enjoyable gatherings of the season.

On Monday evening the proprietor of the Paisley House, Mr. Ed. Douglas, entertained the Paisley House hockey club and a few friends to an oyster supper. A most enjoyable time was spent.

The curling club had a match on Tuesday evening. The opposing sides were Messrs. D. Daly, Rev. McDonald, Thos. Symington, and W. Mowat, skip; against Wm. Templeton, E. H. Baines, W. T. Gibbard, and Dr. Bissonnette, skip. Skip Mowat's side won, the score being 11 to 15 in their favor. Mr. Dennis Daly has a penchant for making "pat lids" and always succeeds in getting in the noose.

Sudden Death.

On Friday last Mr. John Hearn, a respectable farmer of Richmond, while walking to his barn fell over and expired, his death being due to heart trouble. Deceased was 74 years of age and was related to Mr. John Hearn, of Napanee. The funeral took place on Sunday to the Vandebogart cemetery.

A Pretty Wedding.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at St. John's church, Selby, on the 10th inst., when the Rev. W. G. Swayne united in the holy bonds of wedlock Mr. S. D. G. Winters, son of Mr. Thos. Winters, a prosperous young farmer of Richmond, and Miss Nettie McCormick, youngest daughter of the late James McCormick. The groom was supported by Mr. Hugh McCormick while Miss Carrie Winters acted as bridesmaid. The bride was attired in a becoming dark grey travelling suit, trimmed with gimp silk. The bridesmaid looked charming in a dark green dress. After the ceremony the wedding party repaired to the residence of the bride's brother, where an excellent repast was partaken of. The happy couple left on the evening train for Belleville and other western points. We extend congratulations.

Death of J. B. Warner.

Mr. John B. Warner, a son of the late Billings Warner, of Yarker, who was drowned in the Napanee river many years ago, died at his home in Lindsay on Sunday from diabetes, at the age of fifty-two years. Mr. Warner was well-known in Napanee, having carried on a large dry goods business here with Mr. Rudd Perry at one time. Mr. Warner was a very energetic business man and carried on a large and successful business in Lindsay. He was a step-son of the late Edmund Hooper, Ex-M. P., and his mother who was buried here just one year ago was a sister of Mr. Zina Ham. Deceased was a genial and whole-souled gentleman and his untimely demise will be regretted by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. He leaves a wife and seven children to mourn the loss of a good husband and a loving father.

KIDNEY PAIN.

John Snell, of Wingham, Ont., was in a Macistrom of Pain and Agony from Diseased Kidney—South American Kidney Cure was the Welcome "Life Preserver"—It Relieves Instantly and Cures Surely.

Five years ago I had a severe attack of La Grippe which affected my kidneys and caused intense pains in my back and urinary organs. I suffered untold misery, at times I could not walk, and any standing position gave me intense pain. I became worse so rapidly that my family became alarmed. Just at this time I noticed South American Kidney Cure advertised. Although I had little faith left in any remedy—having tried so many worthless ones—but a drowning man will grasp at a straw, and I procured a bottle. In a few days it had worked wonders, and before half a bottle was taken I was totally relieved of pain and two bottles entirely cured me. Sold by A. W. Grange & Bro.
